

Will Keystone XL Disrupt Railroad Companies?

Description

With a decision expected on the northern leg of TransCanada's (TSX:TRP) Keystone XL pipelines in the next year, investors are focused not only on crude oil producers but also on the railroad companies who have experienced a significant increase in crude-by-rail shipments. With over 800 thousand barrels of oil per day capacity, could the Keystone XL pipeline take a bite out of Canadian Pacific (TSX:CP,NYSE:CP) and Canadian National's (TSX:CNR,NYSE:CNI) bottom line?

In the following video, energy analysts Joel South and Taylor Muckerman discuss the markets each company is serving and determine the long-term effects if Keystone XL is approved.
