

Pipeline Opposition Hurting Canadian Energy Producers

Description

In the following video, Motley Fool energy analysts Joel South and Taylor Muckerman discuss Canadian oil producers that are pinched as debates continue over approval for the Northern Gateway and Keystone XL pipelines. While rail is a temporary solution for some producers, opposition to the pipelines both in the U.S. and British Columbia are real causes for concern regarding long-term takeaway capacities. Joel tells investors what the takeaway bottleneck means for Canadian producers.

While oil and natural gas grab many of the energy related headlines we see, uranium has the potential to be the fuel that powers the 21st century.
